

silk (silk) n. A colorful jacket worn by a jockey during a race.
The origin of the modern jockey silks comes from England. Like coats of arms, the distinctive colors and designs on shirts and caps are a way to identify horse and rider. In ancient Rome, chariot drivers may have been the first to sport "racing colors." They wore capes and headbands in bright colors to identify themselves.

See the Kentucky Derby
Live!
Post Time
6:24 p.m.

The race is on...
*Put on Your Silks and Kick Up
Some Dirt!*

Jockey up for a little taste of Nichols' old Kentucky home with hors d'oeuvres, dinner and lots of fun!

Try your luck in the new horseshoe pits and place your bids on a variety of artwork, vacation packages, sporting goods, jewelry and more priceless items.

Saturday, May 1, 2010

Nichols School, Dann Memorial Rink
1250 Amherst Street

5:30 p.m. Cocktails and Silent Auction

8:30 p.m. Dinner and Live Auction